"My aspiration is to create a piece that holds people's interest and continues to draw them back in, that defines a community, and is a public gathering space."

Buck Walsky, an Anchorage, Alaska-based, Colorado Springs-native, considers Beach Front to be the culmination of over 30 years of conceptualizing, dreaming, imagining, and creating. After decades of developing numerous small-scale, working models, this immersive, outdoor installation first came to fruition as a sculptural and architectural achievement at the 2015 Burning Man Festival. By transferring the horizontal movement of wind to the perpendicular plane of the light canopy, the wind becomes visible in a unique way and its fluid properties are illustrated.

On view in the FAC Courtyard through Dec 16.

This has been a momentous year with the alliance between the Fine Arts Center and Colorado College becoming official, and the fruits of our strategic planning labor already being realized. The level of activity and buzz around here has been electric, and we're excited to share with you in these pages all that we're doing and what the future has to offer. We value you as a member and are grateful for your continued support and participation in the extraordinary experiences that the Fine Arts Center provides for the community.

Because of our multi-disciplinary mission and the high volume of activity and offerings across the museum, theatre, and art school, we expect that each issue of ArtsFocus will be jam-packed with tons of great information. We also recognize that we cannot fit everything within these pages, but will do our best to bring relevant, compelling, and timely information to you about a wide variety of Fine Arts Center topics. We plan to publish three issues a year. They will arrive by email upon the release of each issue, and if you are a Benefactor Level member or above, we'll also mail a printed copy right to your door.

An Historic Alliance

The Fine Arts Center Joins Forces with Colorado College

On August 25, 2016, the Fine Arts Center and Colorado College announced an historic agreement that would bring together the two organizations. Going beyond simply merging the two, the alliance creates a new, forward-looking structure that honors the commitment of both institutions to sustainable fine arts programming.

A formal strategic planning process began immediately, and included significant community input and engagement to develop the vision for the combined future of the FAC and CC. The outreach and planning process garnered more than 3,000 comments from community members. From this process, three themes emerged: excellence, access, and collaboration.

The strategic plan was approved in June 2017, and as stated in the document, “our aim is to create a national model of distinction for an arts center that joins with a college to serve the campus, the community, the region, and the world.” On July 1, 2017, the name of the combined organization became the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center at Colorado College.

The legal agreement that guides the alliance calls for a four-year transition period to allow for careful planning and integration of the three programming areas of the FAC — the museum, Bemis School of Art, and the performing arts. The focus on the museum started in July 2017, with Bemis School of Art slated to begin in July 2018, and the performing arts in July 2019. By July 1, 2020, the transition will be complete.

EARLY PROGRESS

Even before the finalization of the alliance, the FAC and CC began partnering on projects encompassing theater, music, art, and education that suggest endless potential for our combined future.

- This fall, the museum’s first Mellon Grant artist-in-residence, Raven Chacon, collaborated with CC Music Professor, Victoria Levine, and Spanish Professor, Carrie Ruiz, on creating a unique course — Song, Poetry, and Performance in the Southwest — among other collaborations.
- Currently, there are 13 CC student guides in the museum galleries, and combined, they speak a total of 11 different languages.
- Over the summer, FAC staff and CC faculty selected two CC students to create site-specific installations for an exhibition at the FAC.
- CC Assistant Professor of Music, Ryan Bañagale, composed original music, and his students recorded it, for the FAC’s theatre production of Enchanted April in February 2017.

- CC student and Psychology major Emily Gardner ‘19 performed in the FAC’s production of Bye Bye Birdie in April 2017.
- Last fall, the FAC conference room was equipped to function as a CC classroom for groups touring the museum and using the FAC art collection as part of the curriculum.
- CC Senior Assistant Dean of Students, Cesar Cervantes, currently coordinates the featured acts for the FAC’s Happy Hour Stand-Up comedy shows on select First Fridays, and he also teaches stand-up comedy classes at the FAC — the next class starts in June 2018.
- Bemis School of Art is actively collaborating with the CC Art Department. Together, they are offering a number of classes and open studios in Figure Drawing and Darkroom Photography.

INVESTING IN THE ARTS

The college has dedicated more than $20 million of its endowment funds to support the FAC while the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center Foundation — established in 1996 to manage and enhance the FAC’s endowment — will continue as an independent, community-led foundation dedicated solely and in perpetuity to supporting the FAC.

Thanks to this commitment by the college, the FAC’s base operational needs are covered by this endowment, and all contributed revenue can go straight into delivering quality, meaningful, and expanded arts programming. This means the critical support we receive from members, donors, foundations, and sponsorships provides direct investment in world-class museum exhibitions, performing arts programming and training, arts education, and creative exploration across our community.

It’s an exciting time at the FAC with this visionary and aspirational strategic plan, identifying excellence, access, and collaboration as our main focuses. The work that has already begun to bring these two organizations together has set the stage for forging a bright, vibrant future for the arts in this region and beyond. ■

Sargent's Young Lady in White: Miss Elsie Palmer

Dr. Rebecca Tucker, Museum Director

John Singer Sargent's wonderful portrait of Miss Elsie Palmer (1890) is one of the most recognized and beloved works in the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center at Colorado College. Since January 2017, the painting has been on loan to Ightham Mote, a 700-year old medieval castle in Kent, England, the site at which Miss Elsie was originally painted by Sargent. While we may miss Elsie's presence here, she has been a tremendous hit abroad. The text below, which appeared in the ABC Bulletin of the National Trust in England in Spring of 2017, shows the delight in Elsie's presence at Ightham Mote. Our thanks to Philip Stott, (Emeritus Professor, SOAS University of London, and Volunteer Room Guide & Researcher, Ightham Mote) for permission to use his text.

"A Young Lady in White was painted at Ightham Mote by John Singer Sargent (1856-1925) between 1889 and 1890. It forms the pinnacle of an important exhibition entitled The Queen of Ightham Mote—an American Interlude: Queen Palmer, John Singer Sargent and their Circle, which runs from 4 March to 23 December 2017...

Elsie's portrait captures the spirit of place, and the spirit of the times, when, for a glorious if brief period, the Mote became a centre for the Aesthetic movement. Elsie (1872-1955), with her two younger sisters, Dorothy, always known as 'Dos', and Marjory, had been brought to England from America by their mother, Queen Mellen Palmer (1850-1894), who first rented the Mote in April 1887. It was to prove an exciting and eventful three years for the teenage Elsie, who fell in love with the old house and its enchanting surroundings. In turn, her mother was to hold court at the Mote for three colourful years. For Queen, this medieval manor became her 'Dearly beloved Mote', a rural salon for the elite of the Aesthetic movement. She turned the magical 14th-century Great Hall into a 'medieval mecca' for the great and the good, both American and British, of the Aesthetic movement, including the American writer Henry James ... and, most importantly, John Singer Sargent. Amusingly, Henry James described Queen as 'spontaneous, loquacious and really charming', wryly noting in his somewhat bitchy manner '... her native and, I should suppose, characteristically Coloradoish hospitality'.

THE PORTRAIT

Elsie's portrait took Sargent 18 months to complete because, following the scandal of Madame X (Madame Pierre Gautreau), which he had exhibited at the 1884 Paris Salon, he needed to re-establish himself as a major portraitist...

It was a bold move by Queen to choose such a controversial portraitist to capture her daughter as an icon of the Aesthetic movement. Contemporary commentators thought that they could detect a tension between the artist and the sitter, one observing that 'the expression of the face indicates that the stubborn nature has not yet been subdued by torture'. Likewise, recent interpretations have tended to be critical of Sargent. In 2010, Alexa L. Hayes, for example, observed that 'Elsie sits unwillingly, a woman in possession of herself but still at the mercy of a man with the paintbrush', while Alison Syme, also in 2010, saw a 'pure white blossom', 'a flower cut down by the painter'. By contrast, more recent work by Donna M. Lucey (to be published in August 2017), who has studied Elsie's letters and diary in depth, questions such interpretations. Lucey argues that, despite the boredom of the sittings (and there were many of these), Elsie was fond of Sargent, and that she enjoyed spending time with him. Sargent would often argue over literature or other matters during sittings. Elsie employs the delightful term 'catemang' to describe this lively banter. In reality, it seems that Elsie took pride in being painted by Sargent, and, in later years, she often invited him to dinner parties. They remained friends until Sargent's death in 1925."

Watch for Elsie's return in the summer of 2018, accompanied by works from the permanent collection of the National Trust at Ightham Mote. ■

Museum Interns 2017-18

The start of the school year brought new opportunities for the museum and the students of Colorado College with the introduction of the Museum Internship Program, funded by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. Four students have committed to a year of interning across the museum including:

Julia Tarantino, a senior Environmental Policy major from Summit, New Jersey, a lacrosse player, an environmental organizer, a campus journalist, and now, a museum intern. Julia brings many research and analytical skills to the museum, along with her passion for the arts and community projects.

Wayan Buschman, a sophomore English Literature major, hailing from New York City. With painting classes at the National Academy Museum and School and an internship at the David Zwirner Gallery behind her, Wayan is excited to combine her writing skills with a deeper understanding of the arts and the art world, and open doors to a range of academic and professional opportunities.

The Healing Power of the Arts

Tara Sevanne Thomas, Director & Jeremiah Houck, Assistant Director, Bemis School of Art

Great things are happening all around the Fine Arts Center, and the Bemis School of Art is not missing out on any of it. The FAC’s recent alliance with Colorado College brought an instantaneous rush of support and resources, both tangible and intangible, to the FAC’s art school. From the core of our cast concrete building (which just this year turned a half-century old!), to the surrounding grounds (some of the koi in our fishpond recently celebrated their sweet sixteen, and report to us in their own fishy ways that they have never been happier!), to our classrooms, equipment, and new supplies (both high and low tech), the support provided in these initial months is wonderfully extensive and very welcome.

These improvements, while paving the way for additional future opportunities, also strengthen our existing programs. Some of the important classes that will continue to grow stronger because of this alliance are our Military Artistic Healing classes, a program now entering its second decade at Bemis. This class offers a way for active-duty military personnel, veterans, and their families to discover the techniques to inspire creative skills and gain greater self-awareness while also encouraging students to use artistic exercises outside of class to help with trauma and stress reduction. Thanks entirely to individual donations and grants, the classes offered in this program are free to the participants — a rare thing these days!

Instructor Kim Le Nguyen claims that, “once you express yourself on paper, then the therapy begins.” This is a central theme of her classes today, as well as when she developed these types of classes with Bemis Director Tara Thomas in 2006. Knowing that not everyone immediately understands the connection between making art and healing trauma, she is quick to show the students who enroll in her classes that in doing so, it “proves they have enough courage to gain greater self-awareness. In expressing themselves through different creative processes, they learn that the more they invest time into the program, the more balanced and whole they become,” a strategy Bemis has started applying in many of its classes.

Throughout this time, she has also made available regular opportunities for the students to show their work in the FAC museum and other off-site locations. Currently, five of her students have work displayed at the Mount Carmel Center of Excellence, located on the southwest side of Colorado Springs.

Serving at-risk groups, individuals with developmental disabilities, and gifted and talented children, through mediums such as drawing, painting, and sculpture are common themes Bemis engages with daily, and we will continue to deliver with excellence as the full potential of the alliance approaches. The future of this community art school is brimming with possibilities and potential, and we look forward to sharing updates with you on further developments. ■

America's Most Loved Musical, Live On Stage This Holiday Season!

Scott RC Levy, Producing Artistic Director and Director of Performing Arts

When I was seven years old, I saw Annie for the first time. To be fair, it was the somewhat unfaithful 1982 film adaptation that I saw on the big screen, and not the live theatre extravaganza that we are producing at the FAC this holiday season. But ever since I began my career as an Artistic Director for America's regional theatres, I have always thought about directing this classic piece of musical theatre, trying twice before to get the rights to produce it. But now, as the musical celebrates its 40th anniversary of premiering on Broadway, I finally get the chance, and I couldn't be more excited!

Annie is one of the world's most performed musicals and has been seen by millions of people. Martin Charnin, one of the creators of the musical, claims that since its premiere in 1977, there has been at least one performance of Annie somewhere in the world every single day.

As you may know, Annie started life in 1924 as a wildly popular comic strip by Harold Gray entitled "Little Orphan Annie." As the 1930s began, "Little Orphan Annie" appeared weekly on the airwaves as one of the most listened to radio shows for eight years. And now, we are excited to introduce a new generation of audience members (and young actresses) to the magical and glorious world of Annie, Daddy Warbucks, Miss Hannigan, and the rest of the gang.

JOURNEY TO THE STAGE

The theatre staff and I have been working on this production for nearly a year already. Once we acquired the rights, we assembled the design team for this production, which features our own award-winning team including Chris Sheley's scenic design and Holly Anne Rawls' lighting. Also joining us on this project is frequent design collaborator Lex Liang, whose incredible costumes you've seen on our stage in recent productions like Shrek, White Christmas, and Guys and Dolls.

Over the summer, we held a series of auditions to perfectly cast the 26 human roles (and two canine roles) in the show. Auditions are always fun, but it was particularly exciting to see over 50 girls, between the ages of six and 14, in consideration for the seven orphan roles in the production. There was such wonderful talent on display, it was very hard for me and the rest of the creative team (our choreographer, Nathan Halvorson and our Musical Director, Jay Hahn) to make our final decisions.

MEET SANDY

Another exciting casting element is our partnership with the Humane Society of the Pikes Peak Region. Through our relationship, we auditioned a few dogs at their fabulous shelter facility to find the perfect canine to play Annie's four-legged sidekick, Sandy. After a few months, we found the perfect fit. She is a two-year old Airedale Terrier mix, whom is known as Sandy on and off the stage. The Humane Society has been providing training for Sandy for months, and in mid October, our orphans and Sandy met each other at the theatre for the first time. It was instant love! ■

Sandy is proudly representing all of her adoptable friends at the Humane Society of the Pikes Peak Region this holiday season! Fortunately, Sandy will have a home, but to learn more about her adoptable friends in need of a new family, visit hsppr.org/adopt.

A Deeper Dive into Art

Exclusive Member Lectures

Ragnarök in Norse Art and Imagination

Wed, Dec. 6, 5:30–6:30 p.m.

No historical people have been as strongly associated with their vision of the end of the world as the medieval Norse or Vikings. But our surviving medieval sources for the myth of Ragnarök, the “twilight (or fate) of the gods,” are very specific about details that are often forgotten and do not include many of the events and scenes strongly associated with the end of the world today. In this talk, Dr. Jackson Crawford, Instructor of Nordic Studies at the University of Colorado Boulder and a bestselling translator of the Norse myths, will present the vision of Ragnarök that the Vikings left for us in their poems and carvings.

Adolf Dehn and the American Land

Sat, Dec. 9, 11 a.m.–12 p.m.

Join Henry Adams, Ph.D. as he discusses Adolf Dehn and the development of American modernism in the early 20th century. Dr. Adams is the guest curator of this year's “Legacy Series” exhibition, Adolf Dehn and the American Land and is a professor at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio.

New Admission Rates, Additional Free Days, Extended Hours, and More

At a time when funding and access to the arts are being reduced at both local and national levels, the FAC is creating greater access to the arts through multiple initiatives that have stemmed from the implementation of the FAC/CC strategic plan titled “Excellence, Access, and Collaboration.”

Reduced admission prices and extended hours are just a few of the steps we’ve taken to make it easier than ever to enjoy the arts. We now offer two Museum Free Days, the third Friday and second Saturday of each month. And, in an effort to maximize learning opportunities and foster a lifelong love and appreciation for the arts with area youth, we created the Passport to the Arts program for fourth grade students and their families! This program includes a free one-year membership, free children’s theatre tickets to select productions, discounts on art classes, and more.

But that’s not all, the initiatives for creating greater access go beyond the museum with new expanded membership benefits, and Wednesday evening theatre performances for select Mainstage productions where theatre-goers will be able to enjoy award-winning theatre for a discounted, flat ticket price of $20 per seat! Watch in the coming months for news on additional programs and offerings we’re creating to fulfill the vision outlined in the strategic plan. It’s all about removing potential barriers to visitation and making sure we’re doing everything we can to create access to exceptional arts experiences for this great community.
